Bettendorf set to reopen downtown fire station

Bettendorf firefighter Tom Payne assists during a medical call Tuesday. Payne works out of the Spruce Hills Fire Station, currently the only fully staffed station in Bettendorf. By July 1, the State Street station again will be staffed with firefighters.

Council unanimously approves decision to staff State Street site

jcullen@qctimes.com

After an eight-year vacancy, Bettendorf's State Street Fire Station is set to reopen July 1.

The Bettendorf City Council unanimously approved the change Tuesday night. The consent agenda item included seven promotions within the department and a revised, one-year collective bargaining contract that includes wage restructuring between the city and the firefighters' union.

During Monday's discussion at the council's committee-of-the-whole meeting, City Administrator Decker Ploehn said city staff members have reached an agreement with the Bettendorf Professional Firefighters Association after 2½ months of "fruitful negotiations."

"We all rolled up our sleeves, and think we've found a cost-neutral way for this to happen without hiring any additional personnel," Ploehn said.

The city will promote a captain to assistant chief, three lieutenants to captains and three firefighters to lieutenants — the department's first promotions since the early 1990s, Chief Gerry Voelger said.

Matt Lawson, president of the firefighters union, said the adjustments restructure the department's pay scale for captains and lieutenants.

"For us, it's a really a win-win because we'll be safer at the fire

Bettendorf Fire Chief Gerry Voelger's office is in the downtown fire station at 1609 State St., where three firefighters and a company officer will join him July 1.

"It's been a long project in the making, but this time we had a council that truly did stand behind us and made this a priority."

scenes. We'll respond faster, and those guys (who are promoted) will make more money than they do today," he said. "It's been a long project in the making, but this time we had a council that truly did stand behind us and made this a priority."

The city plans to staff the station at 1609 State St. with three firefighters and either a captain or a lieutenant by July 1 at the latest.

In February, Ploehn said the current budget did not have room for any promotions.

Under the city's current contract with the firefighters union, if the department's captain is on vacation or at training, the city must pay a lieutenant to step up for the day, also known as out-of-rank pay. On average, the department pays $71,000 for out-of-rank pay every year, Ploehn said.

He added that the newly negotiated wage scale is less than the current contract that ends June 30. Firefighters who would have been promoted under the current contract Former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee waves to supporters Tuesday in Hope, Ark., after he announced that he is running for the Republican presidential nomination.

Huckabee announces bid for president

Former Arkansas governor says he's best Clinton rival

Associated Press

HOPE, Ark. — The other man from Hope is running for president again.

Declaring Tuesday that he can bring "the kind of change that truly can get America from hope to higher ground," former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee announced his Republican candidacy in the hometown he shares with former President Bill Clinton.

Though they share roots in Hope, Huckabee is pitching himself as the best Republican to take on Bill's wife, Hillary Clinton, the dominant Democrat in the 2016 race.

Sensors keep watchful eye on the elderly

SAN FRANCISCO — Each 11me 81-year-old Bill Dworsky or his 80-year-old wife Dorothy opens the refrigerator, closes the bathroom door or lifts the lid on a pill container, tiny sensors in their San Francisco home make notes on a digital logbook.

The couple's 53-year-old son, Phil, checks it daily on his smartphone. If there's no activity during a designated time, the younger Dworsky gets an automated email, so he can decide whether to call or stop by. "This is peace of mind, really," he says of the system he installed last year.

Branstad defends fertilizer plant amid layoffs

Erin Murphy
Times Bureau

DES MOINES — As one Democratic state legislator rallied against layoffs during construction of a $1.8 billion fertilizer plant in Lee County, Republican Gov. Terry Branstad on Tuesday defended the project, which was awarded a half-billion dollars in local, state and federal tax breaks. Egypt-based Orascom Construction Industries is building a plant in Wever that will produce 2 million tons of fertilizer per year, according to the company. The plant is slated to be up and running late this year.

Bolckcom

The company in April changed contractors on the project and laid off workers. Recently, the company has advertised for workers in other states. Sen. Joe Bolckcom, D-Iowa City, on Tuesday criticized the latest developments at the fertilizer plant. "Most of the fired workers are Iowans. These Iowans helped pay for these jobs on the front end by providing the tax incentives Gov. Branstad handed over to Orascom in the worst economic deal ever," Bolckcom said Tuesday on the Senate floor. "And now they are paying again on the back end by finding themselves in Lee County without a job."

But Branstad's office defended the fertilizer plant, saying it has a payroll of $25 million per month and has reduced Lee County's unemployment by 44 percent.

"This project, which was named the best investment in the world in 2013 by Site Selection magazine, has brought thousands of jobs to Iowa and increased Iowans' family

Branstad seeks to drop abortion-payment role

Governor received power to OK, deny Medicaid funds for procedure in 2013

TONY LEYS | TLEYS@DMREG.COM

Gov. Terry Branstad is ready to relinquish his unique power to decide whether Iowa's Medicaid program should pay for individual abortions.

Legislators voted in 2013 to require the governor's approval before the public insurance program would pay for any abortions. A national expert said Iowa is the only state to have such a rule. The governor's spokesman confirmed this week that Branstad has not asked legislators to renew the rule, because he never has been asked to invoke it.

The rule was passed as a compromise between House Republicans, who wanted to limit abortions, and Senate Democrats, who oppose such limits.

Iowa allows Medicaid reimbursement for abortions only in certain circum-

Former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee officially announces his plans to seek the GOP's presidential nomination Tuesday in Hope, Ark.

Activists: Huckabee will need new focus

During this White House run, ex-governor will face higher expectations

JOSH HAFNER
JHAFNER@DMREG.COM

Mike Huckabee made it official Tuesday: He's running for president again.

If he wants to win Iowa again, however, GOP activists said Huckabee will have to adapt to higher expectations than he faced as a relative unknown ahead of his 2008 Iowa caucuses victory. He will also have to outlast a crowded field of candidates looking for a chunk of the conservative bloc that carried him to victory in 2008.

"He's not viewed as an underdog," said Danny Carroll, Huckabee's Iowa co-chair from 2008. "He can't play that role."

Carroll, a former Iowa legislator, recalls struggling to get a dozen people to show up to see Huckabee at a diner in 2007. This year, a pre-campaign stop by Huckabee at a Sioux City restaurant in March drew nearly 70.

Huckabee, the former Arkansas governor and one-time Fox News host, is back in Iowa for several campaign stops Wednesday and Thursday.

What remains up for debate:

Veteran finds healing by adding fallen soldier's name to memorial

MIKE KILEN | MKILEN@DMREG.COM

His name is Douglas Peterson. He was forgotten. Go through the 866 names on the Iowa Vietnam War Monument at the Iowa State Capitol grounds. Go through the "P's" on the list. Not there.

Yet on Oct. 1, 1969, Peterson suffered war wounds in Vietnam so grave that he later died from them.

His parents, Darrell and Fayella Peterson of Fairfield, mentioned the omission to family long ago, after the monument was dedicated in 1984, but nothing came of it.

Then Dan Gannon of Ankeny showed up. He fought in Vietnam the same year as Peterson but didn't know him.

He heard scuttlebutt a couple of years ago that Peterson's name was missing and started his research. This is why: He made a promise in 2003 that if he survived the war — and in many ways he was still fighting his injuries to him — he would do everything he could to help other veterans.

"Because I've gotten to know suffering," he said. "Because I had friends who didn't come home."

Doug Peterson entered boot camp at age 18 in 1967 and served in Company D, 1st Battalion, 505th Infantry Regiment of the 82nd Airborne Division.

In July 1969, as a rifleman in Long An Province in Vietnam, he faced a hostile force in a fierce ground battle. His unit ambushed the enemy in an intense firefight from only about 65 feet. Peterson continued heavy fire, despite the barrage aimed at him, and killed a North Vietnamese soldier and recovered valuable documents.

He was awarded an Army Commendation Medal with a "V" for heroism.

Peterson's sister Julie Glueck of Keosauqua remembers him as a "caring, fun guy" who wanted to enlist and fight for his country, proud to wear the uniform. But in the 40 years since, she mostly remembers him suffering in the years after he returned.

On Oct. 1, 1969, he suffered wounds to his lungs, spleen, and spine from enemy small-arms fire. He was a paraplegic, and for more than five years he fought for his life, transferring to several hospitals, the last in Houston, Texas. Glueck helped care for him until he knew his time was short. Peterson wanted to return to his home state to die, which he did at the age of 25 on March 9, 1975.

His family has not forgotten his sacrifice. Gannon was determined that Iowans shouldn't, either.

Gannon didn't plan on going into the military. He grew up on a farm with 13 siblings and planned to return there after graduating from Iowa State University in 1969. But then his brother was severely wounded in the Vietnam War, and he wanted to avenge

Gore: Make CLIMATE an issue in 2016

Jon Stouder/The Gazette

As presidential hopefuls head for C.R., so does former VP

By Brian Low, The Gazette

CEDAR RAPIDS — Iowans can help make climate change an issue in the next presidential election cycle, former Vice President Al Gore said Tuesday during a presentation in downtown Cedar Rapids.

"More and more Iowans care about the climate crisis. Iowa is a leader in renewable energy. And Iowans can exert influence in their conversations with candidates," leading up to the state's first-in-the-nation presidential caucuses, Gore said at a climate leadership training event at the DoubleTree by Hilton Hotel.

"We've got to put a price on carbon in the marketplace and put a price on denial in politics," he told about 400 people attending a three-day Climate Reality Project event intended to increase their advocacy skills.

Gore, who served under President Bill

Clinton, brought his program to Iowa as presidential aspirants are rallying throughout the state.

The 2008 Oscar-winning documentary film, "An Inconvenient Truth," featured his campaign to make global warming an issue. He founded the Climate Reality Project, which seeks to mobilize action among volunteers.

At his presentation, Gore ticked off a succession of recent climate-related disasters and presented climate scientists' projections of doomsday conditions by the end of the century.

He also expressed confidence that wider understanding of the issue, coupled with increasing cost effectiveness of alternative energy sources, "can turn our most serious challenge into our greatest opportunity."

Linn County prosecutors vote on joining labor union

Their salaries lag too far behind bosses, official says

By Rick Smith, The Gazette

CEDAR RAPIDS — Fifteen assistant Linn County prosecutors are voting to see if they want to unionize, in large part because they believe their salaries have fallen too far behind those of Linn County Attorney Jerry Vander Sanden and his two top deputies.

Matt Fischer, assistant business manager for IBEW Local 204 in Cedar Rapids, said Tuesday the vote by the assistant prosecutors is not unlike one taken earlier by 21 Linn County Sheriff's Office sergeants who similarly disliked the widening salary gap between themselves and the sheriff and his top deputies.

"They're of the opinion that there has been significant increases for the folks at Jerry's level" and for his top two deputies, Fischer said. "Those wages have continued to go up more significantly than the folks who are actually in the trenches doing the work every day and prosecuting the cases for the county."

Fischer said the assistant prosecutors approached Local 204 in the last couple of months to have the union set up a vote to organize.

They also have expressed concerns about work schedules that can include weekends and holidays, he said. Ballots will go out at the end of this week and will be opened May 26.

Vander Sanden said Tuesday he did not want to comment on what might have

Carson wants to get to know Iowans

At Cedar Rapids rally, candidate denies
 'purveyors of division'

By James Q. Lynch, The Gazette

CEDAR RAPIDS — When presidential candidate Ben Carson says he's not a politician, he seems to be distancing himself from what he calls the "purveyors of division" who try to "separate us, to make us into enemies."

"We have a war on women, age wars, income wars, race wars, religious wars. Every kind of war you can imagine ... because they recognize there is strength in our unity," Carson told more than 200 people at a rally Tuesday afternoon in Cedar Rapids.

The rally was part of the retired neurosurgeon's first day on the Iowa caucuses campaign trail after formally entering the race for the 2016 GOP presidential nomination Monday in his hometown of Detroit. Carson won frequent applause during his 22-minute speech that touched on federal government overreach, taxation, replacing the health care law, policing and the military.

However, his audience wasn't sure how to take Carson when he talked about his childhood and running from the police "back in the days before they would shoot you."

Southwestern Community College students Elijah Gillette and Katie Brockman finish filming Black Hawk Elementary School students for a video promoting positive behavior at the Burlington school.

Video project showcases positive behavior expected at Black Hawk school

By JOEY ACURRE

Black Hawk Elementary School students threw sand chips at one another, cut in line and used their outside voices inside after school Monday. They were misbehaving in front of cameras.

Three Southwestern Community College students in Carlsone Wood sides multimedia class are creating a video, showcasing the Positive Behavior in Schools program, known as PBS, for a class project.

They used the Black Hawk Elementary School staff as their actors.

"What we're going to do is the video will show the appropriate behavior, the inappropriate behavior, then end with the appropriate behavior again on every segment."

Terri Van Hagen, extended learning program teacher

Terri Van Hagen, the extended learning program teacher at the Burlington elementary school, was asked by the Black Hawk PBS committee to make a video promoting and showcasing positive behavior at school.

Van Hagen intended to do the video herself, but after becoming busier than expected, she contacted Wood side at SCC.

She said the partnership between the elementary school and college has been existing for teachers at Black Hawk and students at SCC.

"This is their final project, so they will get a grade," Woodside said about her students. "There's a lot of pressure, and they know that."

Woodside said SCC's animation department is creating an animated heart to reinforce the elementary school's motto, "Black Hawk Has Heart," which will be included in the videos.

On Monday, SCC freshman Katie Brockman, sophomore Trevor Cooper and third year student Isaac Berry videotaped Black Hawk staff demonstrating bad behavior.

The teachers did their best impersonations of students behaving badly in their classrooms, on the playground, in the hallways, at the cafeteria, at their lockers, in the library and at an assembly.

Last week, students demonstrated good behavior in those same areas.

"What we're going to do is the video will show the appropriate behavior, the inappropriate behavior, then end with the appropriate behavior again on every segment," Van Hagen said.

Workers' comp spurs debate

Gov pushing cutting costs, while Dems say plan hurts workers and their families

By SARA BURNETT
sburnett@trib.com

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Business groups and injured employees weighed in Tuesday as Illinois lawmakers began debating whether to revamp the state's workers' compensation insurance program to reduce costs for employers.

Democratic House Speaker Michael Madigan called a meeting of the Illinois House to hear testimony on the issue, which Republican Gov. Bruce Rauner said is one of his top legislative priorities.

Rauner has said Illinois' costs are among the highest in the nation, and cutting them will help lure companies from other states and create jobs.

But Madigan and other Democrats said Rauner's proposals would hurt working people and their families.

For several hours Tuesday, workers who were hurt at work told legislators how their injuries and loss of income had turned their lives upside down. Some had lost their homes or their retirement and are permanently disabled.

John Coffell, who was hurt on the job in Oklahoma, had to go on food stamps and send his three children to live with relatives because Oklahoma had cut workers' compensation benefits.

"There are people just like me here in Illinois that will pay the price if you choose to go down the same path that my state did," Coffell said.

Republicans criticized the hearing as unbalanced, saying they weren't enough input from the business community.

They also said they weren't even proposing some of the changes Democrats were criticizing, such as cutting the amount of benefits workers with lifetime work-place injuries receive.

"I don't believe there's anybody in this room that would not want someone that gets injured on the job, who played by the rules, and who works hard not to be made right," GOP Rep. Michael Liles said.

"It appears like there's maybe some in this room that believe that it's more important to have good theory than good policy,"

History on display in Israel

Oldest complete copy of Ten Commandments will be shown

By DANIEL ESTERN
destern@trib.com

JEERUSALEM — The world's oldest complete copy of the Ten Commandments is going on rare display at Israel's Jewish Museum in an exhibit tracing civilization's most pivotal moments.

The 2,000-year-old Dead Sea Scroll, from a collection of the world's most ancient biblical manuscripts discovered near the Dead Sea east of Jerusalem, never before has been publicly displayed in Israel and has been shown only in brief exhibits abroad, said a spokesman for the Israel Antiquities Authority.

The manuscript is so brittle it will only be on display at the Jewish Museum in Jerusalem for two weeks before it is returned to a secure, pitch-black, climate-controlled storage facility there.

Mike Huckabee announces second run for White House

By BILL BARROW
and ANDREW DEMILLO
abarow@trib.com

HOPE, Ark. — Mike Huckabee declared his presidential candidacy Tuesday, counting on his brand of conservative populism to make his second White House bid more successful than his first. In 2009, he captured evangelical Republican but couldn't build wide enough support to win the Republican nomination.

The former Arkansas governor announced his 2016 bid in the hometown he shares with former President Bill Clinton, he is coming to the state's notable Republican to enter the campaign, with more to come. "Power, money and political influence have left a lot of Americans behind," Huckabee told supporters in a speech railing against "big government bailouts" and pleading elimination of the IRS, "the biggest bully in America."

A populist but no Democrat, he did not endorse a minimum wage increase, instead calling for policies encouraging a "maximum wage" for workers. But he did align himself with labor interests in endorsing "unbalanced trade deals" and describing President Barack Obama's immigration policy as a way to "import low-wage labor, undercut American workers and drive wages lower than the Dead Sea."

The ordained minister — he was Arkansas Baptist Convention president before getting into politics — speaks the language of faith, and he played up the cultural conservatism feared in that small town where several relatives — and a few Clinton relatives — still live.

How much more will the Romney-Ryan Medicare plan cost you?

Learn how much you and your family would have to pay

Gov. Mitt Romney and Rep. Paul Ryan want to convert the Medicare program into a voucher system for people who are under 55 years of age.¹ Under their plan seniors would receive vouchers to purchase health insurance from private insurance companies or from traditional Medicare. If premiums for Medicare or the private plan they choose cost more than the voucher amount, seniors will have to pay the difference themselves. The Romney-Ryan plan would also convert Medicaid into a block grant program and repeal the Affordable Care Act. Gov. Romney and Rep. Ryan claim that no one over 55 will be affected by their health care plan. This claim is false. Their plan would harm all seniors.
